

IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

ENCATTO LTD.,

Plaintiff,

v.

OBSCURA DIGITAL INCORPORATED,

Defendants.

No. C 12-2940 CW

ORDER GRANTING DEFENDANT'S MOTION
TO DISMISS

Defendant Obscura Digital has filed a motion to dismiss Plaintiff Encatto's complaint. Plaintiff opposes the motion. The motion was decided on the papers. Having considered all of the parties papers, the Court grants Defendant's motion. Docket No. 6.

BACKGROUND

Plaintiff is a Belize company that is a subsidiary of Gazprom Invest-Vostok, a Russian company. Complaint ¶ 2. Defendant is a California company with its principal place of business in San Francisco. Complaint ¶ 3. In 2011, Gazprom engaged Apogee Ventures Ltd., a British company, to arrange a public relations

1 event to take place in September 2011 in Russia. Complaint ¶ 6.
2 In July 2011, Apogee contacted Defendant to inquire about 3 Defendant producing a film for the September event. Complaint 4 ¶ 7.

5 Because the date of the event was approaching, Gazprom sought 6 to have Defendant's film crew begin filming as quickly as 7 possible. Id. Accordingly, on July 21, 2011, Gazprom asked 8 Defendant to provide a budget for filming alone, without any pre-9 or post-production costs. Id. Defendant stated that the film 10 shoot would cost $40,000, including all equipment costs. Id. On 11 July 23, 2011, Apogee and Gazprom representatives met with 12 Defendant. Complaint ¶ 8. During that meeting Apogee and 13 Defendant reached an agreement that upon receipt of a down
14 payment, Defendant would begin filming while the parties continued 15 to negotiate final terms, conditions and pricing for the 16 production phase of the film project. Id.

17 Plaintiff sent Defendant a $50,000 down payment on Gazprom's
18 behalf. Complaint ¶ 9. Apogee requested that Defendant begin 19 filming immediately. Id. Defendant sent its film crew to Russia
20 and began filming. Id. On July 27, 2011, Defendant informed 21 Apogee that the cost of the ten-day film shoot was $30,000, not 22 $40,000 as it previously quoted. Id.

23 Apogee and Defendant continued to negotiate pricing for post-24 production of the film. Complaint ¶ 11. Defendant informed 25 Apogee that it would cost $1,973,400 to complete the film. Id.
26 Apogee did not agree to this amount. Id. On August 10, 2011, 27 Plaintiff sent Defendant an additional $100,000 while Apogee and 28 Defendant continued to negotiate. Id.

On August 16, 2011, Gazprom directed Apogee to make a counter-offer of $631,900 to complete post-production. Complaint ¶ 12. Defendant rejected Apogee's counter-offer and discontinued work on the project. Complaint ¶ 13. Defendant has not returned any portion of the $150,000 it received. Complaint ¶ 17. Plaintiff alleges one cause of action for unjust enrichment. Defendant now moves to dismiss the complaint pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(6) for failure to state a claim and Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(7) for failure to join an indispensable party. Because the Court dismisses pursuant to Rule 12(b)(7), it need not reach Defendant's alternate argument pursuant to Rule 12(b)(6).

DISCUSSION

Defendant moves to dismiss pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 12(b)(7) for failure to join an indispensable party. Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19 provides,

A person who is subject to service of process and whose joinder will not deprive the court of subject-matter jurisdiction must be joined as a party if:

(A) in that person's absence, the court cannot accord complete relief among existing parties; or

(B) that person claims an interest relating to the subject of the action and is so situated that disposing of the action in the person's absence may:

(i) as a practical matter impair or impede the person's ability to protect the interest; or

(ii) leave an existing party subject to a substantial risk of incurring double, multiple, or otherwise inconsistent obligations because of the interest.

Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a). Such parties are referred to as "necessary" or "required" parties. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1).

1 If a necessary party cannot be joined, the court must determine 2 whether "equity and good conscience" will permit the action in the 3 party's absence. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b). If not, the party is 4 considered "indispensable" and the lawsuit must be dismissed in 5 the absence of that party. Provident Tradesmens Bank & Trust Co.
6 v. Patterson, 390 U.S. 102, 118 (1968). The moving party bears
7 the burden of persuasion in arguing for dismissal under Rule 19.
8 Clinton v. Babbitt, 180 F.3d 1081, 1088 (9th Cir. 1999).

9 Defendant argues generally that both prongs of Rule 19(a) are 10 satisfied in this case with respect to Gazprom because the 11 payments at issue were made in relation to the agreement between 12 Gazprom and Defendant. Defendant asserts that resolution of the 13 question of whether Defendant was entitled to keep the money it 14 received will turn on the agreement between it and Gazprom and the 15 work Defendant performed. Therefore, Defendant argues that absent 16 Gazprom's presence, "the court cannot accord complete relief among 17 existing parties." Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(a)(1)(A).

18 In Haas v. Jefferson Nat. Bank of Miami Beach, the Fifth 19 Circuit held that a third party was a necessary party because his 20 "evidence [would] either support the complaint or bolster the 21 defense," making his presence "critical to the disposition of the 22 important issues in the litigation." 442 F.2d 394, 398 (5th Cir.
23 1971). In that case, the plaintiff sought an injunction directing 24 the defendant bank to issue him shares of its common stock. 442 25 F.3d at 395. The plaintiff alleged that he had an agreement with 26 the third party through which they would jointly purchase shares 27 of the bank's stock. The stocks would issue in the third party's 28 name, but the plaintiff would have one-half ownership of the 1 shares. Id. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant was aware 2 of his ownership interest. Id. The plaintiff further alleged 3 that he asked the third party to order the defendant to issue 4 certificates in the plaintiff's name, which the third party did.

5 Id. However, the bank refused to make the assignment because the 6 third party was indebted to the bank under an agreement which 7 required the third party to "assign, and transfer to the bank 8 property of any kind owned by [the third party] and coming into 9 the possession of the Bank." Id. According to the bank, the 10 third party "withdrew the transfer request and instead pledged the 11 stock certificates with a second bank as collateral for a loan 12 there." Id.

13 At a pre-trial conference, the parties stipulated that the 14 questions of fact remaining to be litigated at trial included the 15 status of the third party's obligation to the bank, and whether 16 the third party had withdrawn his transfer request. Id.
17 Following the entry of these stipulations, the court entered an 18 order directing the plaintiff to amend the complaint to join the 19 third party as a party to the action. Id. Following the 20 amendment, the court granted the defendant's motion to dismiss, 21 finding that joinder of the third party destroyed complete
22 diversity. Id.

23 Because the plaintiff's primary claim was based on the bank's 24 transfer of the stock to the second bank as collateral for the 25 third party's loan, the Fifth Circuit held that the third party 26 was "more than a key witness whose testimony would be of 27 inestimable value." Id. "Instead," the court held, he was "an 28 active participant in the alleged conversion of [the plaintiff's]

1 stock." Id. Moreover, the Fifth Circuit held that the third 2 party's absence would expose the bank to a risk of inconsistent
3 obligations if the plaintiff prevailed and the third party later 4 sued the bank asserting ownership of the shares. Id. Finally,
5 the Fifth Circuit held that a favorable decision for the plaintiff 6 could "impair or impede" the third party's ability to protect his 7 interest in all of the shares of stock. Id.

8 Here, Gazprom is similarly involved in the transaction
9 alleged in Plaintiff's complaint. Plaintiff alleges that it sent 10 money to Defendant on Gazprom's behalf for work that Defendant was 11 to perform for Gazprom. Accordingly, as Defendant argues, the 12 resolution of whether it is liable to return money to Plaintiff 13 turns on the agreement Defendant reached with Gazprom, and the 14 value of the work it performed for Gazprom. Plaintiff appears to 15 agree, stating that Defendant could demonstrate that it was 16 entitled to keep the $150,000 it received "by proving that the 17 work it performed was worth $150,000 or more." Plaintiff's 18 Opposition at 8. The value of the work can only be evaluated in 19 light of the agreement with Gazprom, the party for whom the work 20 was performed. Like the third party in Haas, Gazprom is "more 21 than a key witness whose testimony would be of inestimable value" 22 and "critical to the disposition of the important issues in the 23 litigation." Id. at 398.

24 Moreover, if Plaintiff simply "sent" money to Defendant "on 25 Gazprom's behalf," as Plaintiff alleges in the complaint, Gazprom 26 has an interest in the money at issue in this case, which it 27 cannot protect if it is not present in the case. Accordingly, 28 Gazprom is also a necessary party pursuant to Rule 19(a)(1)(B)(i).

1 Finally, there is potential prejudice to Defendant if it is 2 ordered to pay money to Plaintiff in this case, and Gazprom later
3 sues Defendant seeking repayment of the amount paid to Plaintiff
4 on its behalf. Plaintiff's assertion that Gazprom could only sue 5 Defendant for "consequential damages from Obscura's breach of 6 contract" is unavailing. Even if Defendant prevails in this case, 7 it could be prejudiced by being forced to relitigate these issues
8 in a case brought by Gazprom.

9 The parties agree that Gazprom, a Russian entity, is not 10 subject to the jurisdiction of this Court. Accordingly, the Court 11 must determine whether Gazprom is an indispensable party, that is, 12 whether "in equity and good conscience" this case should be 13 dismissed or proceed in Gazprom's absence. Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b).
14 The factors the Court considers in making this decision include,

15 (1) the extent to which a judgment rendered in the 16 person's absence might prejudice that person or the 17 existing parties; (2) the extent to which any prejudice 18 could be lessened or avoided . . .; (3) whether a 19 judgment rendered in the person's absence would be adequate; and (4) whether the plaintiff would have an adequate remedy if the action were dismissed for nonjoinder.

20 Fed. R. Civ. P. 19(b)(1)-(4). As discussed above, the Court finds 21 that there is potential for prejudice to both Gazprom and 22 Defendant if this case proceeds in Gazprom's absence. Plaintiff
23 argues that to defeat Plaintiff's claim, Defendant need only show 24 that it is entitled to keep the money paid to it, and that "there 25 is no reason it cannot subpoena Gazprom for documents or 26 deposition testimony." Plaintiff's Opposition at 8. However, 27 Gazprom is a Russian company, not subject to the Court's subpoena 28 power. Accordingly, there can be no assurance that Defendant

1 would be able to obtain the evidence necessary to defend itself
2 against Plaintiff's claim.

3 Moreover, because resolution of Plaintiff's claim requires an 4 inquiry into the relationship between Defendant and Gazprom, and 5 the work Defendant performed for Gazprom, there is no possibility 6 of fashioning a remedy to reduce the prejudice. The third 7 criteria, whether the judgment rendered in Gazprom's absence would 8 be adequate refers to the "public stake in settling disputes by 9 wholes, whenever possible." Provident Tradesmens Bank, 390 U.S.
10 at 11. As discussed above, Gazprom is an essential player in the 11 dispute at issue, and there is no way that resolution of 12 Plaintiff's claim will guarantee resolution of the whole dispute 13 at issue. Nothing would prevent Gazprom from bringing another 14 action against Defendant.

15 The Court finds that the first three factors tend to suggest 16 that Gazprom is an indispensable party and dismissal is 17 appropriate. Defendant does not provide any argument or evidence 18 regarding an alternate forum where Plaintiff can bring its claim 19 against Defendant and Gazprom can be joined as a party. While the 20 fourth factor, whether Plaintiff will have an avenue for relief if 21 this case is dismissed, weighs in Plaintiff's favor, the other 22 factors outweigh this factor.

23 Accordingly, the Court dismisses Plaintiff's complaint for 24 failure to join an indispensable party. This dismissal is without 25 prejudice.

26 CONCLUSION

27 For the reasons stated above, the Court GRANTS Defendant's 28 motion to dismiss. Docket No. 6. Plaintiff's complaint against

1 Defendant is dismissed with leave to amend to refile within 2 fourteen days with Gazprom as a co-plaintiff. Dismissal is also 3 without prejudice to refiling in a jurisdiction in which Gazprom
4 can be joined. Because Plaintiff apparently has a preexisting 5 financial relationship with Gazprom, presumably it will be able to 6 join Gazprom as a co-plaintiff, or sue Gazprom for Plaintiff's
7 money back, leaving Gazprom to sue Defendant for Defendant's
8 alleged breach. If Plaintiff does not file an amended complaint
9 timely, the Clerk shall enter a separate judgment. Each party 10 shall bear its own costs of suit.
